[Numb. 881.]

THE South-Carolina Gazette.

From MONDAY March 25th, to MONDAY April 1st, 1751.

BERLIN, December 22.

WE don't know what to think of the precipitate departure of Mr Groſs, miniſter from the Empreſs of Ruſſia. It is whiſpered, that orders have been ſent to M. de Wahrendorff, our miniſter at Peterſburgh, to ſet out from thence with all diligence, to return hither.

Peterſburgh, Dec. 24. Mr. Groſs, our late miniſter at the court of Ruſſia, ſince his return from Berlin, in conſequence of the orders he received from the Empreſs, has had frequent conferences with the miniſtry, and made an exact report to them of the circumſtances that attended his reſidence at Berlin. M. Wahrendorff, his Pruſſian majeſty's miniſter at this court, having alſo received a few days ago an expreſs from the king his maſter, wrote a billet on the ſpot to the count de Beſtucheff, acquainting him with the reaſons which obliged him to prepare immediately for his departure. In anſwer to which there has been put into the hands of the ſaid miniſter a declaration, containing the motives which engaged her Imperial majeſty to recall Mr Groſs. This piece has likewiſe been diſpatched to all the miniſters of her Imperial majeſty at foreign courts, and contains in ſubſtance as follows:

"That notwithſtanding the conſtant care and pains the Empreſs had taken to live in peace and friendſhip with her allies, and the particular regard her Imperial majeſty had at all times ſhewn the court of Pruſſia, that court had, from a certain period, affected to treat the miniſters who reſided there on her part with as much contempt as indifference.

That the intention of the court of Ruſſia in ſending great men to Pruſſia to ſerve in the king's troops, had never been to make them ſlaves, nor to deprive them for ever of the liberty of returning to their own country, on demanding the neceſſary leave. That no difficulties were even dreamt of on that head, with regard to the court of Pruſſia; but that in the event, notwithſtanding all the remonſtrances which had been made on this ſubject, they had always been conſtantly refuſed, under the ſpecious pretence that there was no cartel ſubſiſting between the two courts.

That becauſe the Empreſs had cauſed the captain Staakelberg, an officer in the Pruſſian ſervice, but a ſubject of her Imperial majeſty, to be arreſted, on account of divers miſdemeanors he had committed, and which the ſaid officer himſelf had ſince ſincerely acknowledged, the court of Pruſſia had thought proper on its ſide to arreſt two Ruſſian officers, who were in its ſervice, and had demanded leave to retire; and that notwithſtanding all the inſtances and repreſentations made to obtain their liberty, the court of Pruſſia refuſed it, unleſs captain Staakelberg was likewiſe releaſed.

That the Empreſs having formed the deſign of recalling all the ſubjects of her empire which were in the ſervice of foreign powers, and of giving cognizance thereof to all her miniſters reſident at the different courts of Europe, Mr. Groſs had been refuſed the permiſſion of inſerting the leaſt thing relating to that reſolution in the Gazette of Berlin. That this miniſter, in order to acquit himſelf as well as poſſible of the orders he had received, having ſignified by letters the Empreſs's reſolution to ſome officers, lawful ſubjects of her Imperial majeſty, and actually employed in the ſervice of Pruſſia, he was pretty briſkly cenſured and reprimanded for it by the miniſtry of the ſaid court, who forbid, on the part of the king, any ſuch like notices to be given for the future; and that, as if this had not been ſufficient, they queſtioned the ſaid miniſter many times, to diſcover whether, after the prohibition, he had wrote any more ſuch letters. A conduct which muſt appear the more extraordinary, as it is notorious to all, that a miniſter is not oblig'd to render an account of his actions to any other perſon than his own ſovereign.

That during the lord Hyndford's ſtay at Berlin, Mr. Groſs having made a party with him and the miniſter of the court of Vienna, to viſit Potzdam and Sans-Souci, in order to ſee the curioſities there, the count de Podewils ſignified to him by letter not to make that tour, as his preſence at thoſe places could not fail of being diſagreeable.

That, in the laſt place, a grand feaſt was given at Charlottenbourg, to which all the foreign miniſters, excepting only the miniſter of her Imperial majeſty of all the Ruſſias, were invited, &c.

That, beſides all the particulars above mentioned, it appeared that the court of Pruſſia had no deſire to continue the friendſhip and harmony that had ſubſiſted a long time between the two courts: Which had obliged her Imperial majeſty to order her miniſter at the court of Berlin to depart without taking leave, that his perſon and character might not be expoſed to new inconveniencies and inſults, &c."

On the receipt of this declaration, M. Wahrendorff diſpatched an expreſs to his court; and though he is greatly indiſpoſed, is preparing for an immediate departure, having required the neceſſary paſſports for himſelf and his domeſticks, and an eſcorte to accompany him to the frontiers.

Utrecht, Jan. 7. Letters from Peterſburgh adviſe, that the Ruſſian troops which are to be kept on foot for the ſervice of the year 1751, amount to 464,000 regular troops, excluſive of the Irregulars.

London, Dec. 15. We have it from good authority, that the Earl of Granville will be appointed preſident of the council, (agreeably to what we ſaid a few days ago;) and that his grace the Duke of Marlborough will be made maſter of the horſe.

London, Dec. 18. On thurſday laſt the Lords of the Admiralty appointed Capt. Elias Bate, late commander of his majeſty's ſloop Scorpion at North-Carolina, to be Captain of the Mainard man of war at South-Carolina, vacant by the death of Capt Keller.

London, Dec. 29. From Berlin we are told, that the publick will ſoon be informed of ſeveral very remarkable particulars, relative to the ſtate of affairs between that court and the Ruſſian empire; and that it's doubted whether the court of Vienna's procuring the Guaranty of Sileſia by the dyet of the empire, will be ſufficient, as matters ſtand, to prevent a rupture in one part or another of Europe.

On thurſday was held a grand council at St. James's, at which his majeſty was preſent, when his majeſty declared ſeveral Places vacant of great truſt and importance, which will be filled, it is ſaid, on thurſday next.

London, Jan. 1. 'Tis ſaid the Earl of Loudon, Colonel of a Regiment of foot on the Iriſh eſtabliſhment, and the Earl of Rothes, Colonel of a regiment of dragoons, will be appointed field marſhals, in the room of the Right Hon the Earl of Stair and General Wade.

London, Jan. 3. A bill is prepared and will be brought into parliament, to reduce the number of places for publick diverſion, and to make more effectual the laws uſeful againſt publick gaming, which has for ſome years paſt proved ſo deſtructive to natural induſtry, and too evidently the ſupport of idleneſs and extravagance, the ſure road to theft, robbery and fraud.

London, Jan. 5. By many private letters from the ſeveral ports of France, we have advice of the perpetual arrival there of veſſels, with all kinds of materials for building of ſhips; and alſo, that they are hard at work in the royal yards, for forwarding the men of war on the ſtocks, ſeveral of which are ordered to be ready to launch ſome time next ſpring.

And by all accounts, they are no leſs diligent, on the ſame occaſion, in the ports of his Catholick majeſty.

Advices

Advices from Dresden inform us, that Marshal Count Lewendahl has obtained permission of the French king to make a journey to that court, and stay there six weeks or two months, in order to settle some private affairs that require his presence: Yet they are of opinion that this general's chief errand is a commission of a publick nature, as it is well known that there is a trial of skill between the houses of Austria and Bourbon, about fixing the King of Poland, elector of Saxony, in their service.

London, Jan. 10. We learn from Turin, that the remains of a Roman City, called Industria, on the banks of the River Po, has been lately discovered, and great quantities of very curious pieces of antiquity, of different kinds, have been dug out of the earth, and sent to that capital.

The last letters from Nice say, that the greatest part of the new works made there, by order of the King of Sardinia, to render that port more convenient, have been extremely damaged by the heavy rains and the great hurricanes they have lately had on that Coast; so that the said works cannot be finished near so soon as they hoped, though above 600 men are constantly employed thereon.

Extract of a Letter from Paris, Jan. 1.

'The late Marshal Saxe has not forgot his best friends in his Will. Here follows a short postscript, or conclusion to it: "I "leave to Mess. de C. de D. de H. and de P. to each 24000 l. "These four persons have been a long time attached to me, and "have followed me every-where, both in my adversity and my "prosperity; therefore I leave them this token of my gratitude, "and desire them not to forget me." The King said, that this 'Postscript was an Honour to them.'

London, Jan. 12. The Hague Gazette assures us, under the article of intelligence from London, that France, in order to avoid fresh disputes about Nova Scotia, has consented that the limits thereof shall be settled according to ancient treaties; but as neither by the treaty of Ryswick, nor that of Utrecht, it appears that those limits were fixed on the footing as the British court would have them, there will be a necessity for reciprocally giving way to a reasonable compensation, so as to prevent any more difficulties hereafter: And 'tis said that a Proclamation will be published by both parties in that country, for leaving the Neutral Indians at liberty to adhere to which government they like best; upon condition, however, that they shall afterwards remain neuter on both sides: and 'tis pretended that this is the most reasonable and equitable temperament that can be found. As for the Neutral Islands, 'tis thought they will be divided between the two nations, in as equal a manner as possible; and so the disputes about them will be terminated once for all.—— After which, we shall sit down under our vine, and under our fig-tree, and neither France, nor Spain, nor Prussia, shall make us afraid.

We hear, that in a short time several men of war will be put into commission, which it is supposed are destined for the Baltick, in case matters should not be accommodated in the North.

According to advices from Berlin, publick diversions go on in that city with great order and magnificence; the King regularly assists at them, and also applies himself with the same assiduity to affairs of state. Conferences are very frequent at the palace, since the receipt of the Empress of Russia's late declaration; and the Imperial minister at Berlin seems to take more pains than usual to preserve a good understanding between his Sovereign and the house of Brandenbourg: The guaranty of Silesia, by the dyet of the Empire, is again talked of; but whether sincerely intended, time alone can discover.

The foreign Gazettes inform us, that in a council held here some days ago on the affairs of Algiers, it was resolved to desist from the two articles that were formerly proposed to the Dey of that state; viz. an exclusive trade at Porta Stora, and an abatement of two per Cent. in the duties on English goods carried thither; and to demand among other things, that his Majesty's subjects, that should settle in any part of the the state of Algiers, should enjoy all the advantages usually granted to Allies; and that the Packet-Boats and other vessels having the King's commission, should be considered and treated as men of war, &c. In consequence of which resolution, they say that new instructions have been sent to Commodore Keppel, and Mr. Stanyford, his Majesty's consul at Algiers.

London, Jan. 17. According to advices from Turin, the court of Spain grants certain privileges to the King of Sardinia's subjects that shall trade in the ports of that monarchy; and as there is so good an understanding between the Sardinian court and the house of Bourbon, it has been resolved to bring over all the independent companies that are in the island of Sardinia, in order to incorporate them in the regiments of militia, and set them to keep garrison in the strong towns on the continent. By the same advices we hear, that in the late storms divers ships broke from their moorings in the port of Leghorn, drove out to sea, and have not since been heard of.

This day his majesty went to the house of Peers, and opened the sessions of parliament with a most gracious speech from the throne.

Yesterday Mr. Alderman Janssen entered 119 barrels of Brit. herrings for the Streights, and nine barrels for Dublin.
